This program is very popular! It usually fills up before the March 1st official deadline. To improve your chances apply before:

1. December 15th: The first round of applications will be reviewed in time for this recommended early application date. Some students will make it. I will likely review every week.

2. Early spring: after January 15th, applications will be reviewed on a rolling basis for acceptance. Some students will make it.

3. March 1st: applications submitted at this later deadline will be reviewed until the program is full. While you increase your chances by applying early, some students will withdraw from the program, so not all hope is lost. Some students will make it.
Who is selected?

- Decisions are made based on:
  - GPA and transcripts.
  - Match of course selection/major/cognates to the program content.
  - Class level (priority is given to upper level students who meet all other criteria).
  - Writing facility as demonstrated in the application essay.
  - Likelihood the applicant will enrich the course based on the content of the essay.
What courses will I take?

HM 491: Special Topics in Bioethics and Medical Humanities (6 credits).

Designed with pre-professional students in mind, HM 491 is the only undergraduate course offered by the College of Human Medicine.
What else can this credit count toward?
